Service Learning In Technical And Professional Communication (Part Of The Allyn & Bacon Series In Technical Communication)

Synopsis

Grounded in the practices of ethical deliberation and civic action, this text creates a resource for helping technical and professional communication students and teachers implement service-learning projects in campus and larger communities. Designed for a wide-ranging audience, Service-Learning in Technical and Professional Communication address both advanced and beginning students and both veteran service-learning teachers and those trying it for the first time. The text begins with three chapters that define and explain the authors' approach to service-learning and develop a rhetorical toolbox for implementing this approach. The remainder of the book is loosely organized around the process of developing, executing, and evaluating service-learning projects. These "process" chapters teach rhetorical strategies, ethical concerns, genre conventions, and style principles in an integrated, contextualized way. Discussions of rhetoric and ethics are supplemented with heuristics for analyzing the larger cultural effects of service-learning projects.

Customer Reviews

I needed this book for a Professional Writing class at UTPB. The class opened me up various jobs in the English field other than teaching.

Not the best text book, but had no choice for my class.

I found this book extremely useful in teaching a university course in Writing for Non-Profits (part of a Professional Writing Program), using a "service-learning" approach. The book covers many aspects of writing for a real-world audience, and includes samples of student projects. I don't understand why the book is no longer in print.
